

Lakeland Revival 2017

"Aw'reet", Pavey Ark: Coati 61m VS 4b

Approach: 55 mins

Stroll up the true left side (right as you face it) of the stream that falls from Stickle Tarn, skirt the left side of this and head to the base of the crag. Scramble up Jack's Rake to where the angle eases and you pass a prominent Rowan Tree on your left. Just before a short awkward step there is a chimney on the right (Green route 39 on topo, Gwynne's Chimney). Start 12m right of this chimney.

Descent

Either by Jack's Rake or the large scree gully on the right side of the crag. Either way is painful in tight rock shoes!

1 18m 4b Scramble up to a block ledge at the foot of the groove and climb this, steep but with some satisfyingly good holds, exiting rightwards onto the rib at the top. Step up and move back left to a small ledge and belays.

2 22m 4b A narrow slab leads rightwards to a ledge at the right-hand end of this wall where an innocuously-awkward bulge guards entry to the easier-angled right-facing corner. Once over, step up and pull round left into a parallel narrow corner. Step up and pull round left again into another parallel groove that fades immediately into a crack-line up the slab. Climb this to a spike at the top, which is used to swing down right around the rib and across to belay at a large jammed flake in a ramp-like groove line.

3 21m 4b Step off the jammed flake and pull onto the right wall of the right-facing corner above. The angle eases quickly but then steepens dramatically. Bridge up the corner on good holds to reach flakes that lead rightwards into the final left-facing corner, which is followed to the top. Nut belays in the slab behind.

Easy scrambling leads to the summit.
