

Lakeland Revival 2017

Approach: From Old Dungeon Ghyll Hotel follow the path past Stool End Farm then walk up The Band. Rather than heading all the way to the obvious col, take the path up the ridge on the right, after a steep section of scree follow the exposed and undulating "Climbers' Traverse" below a line of outcrops to Flat Crag; keep close under the right end of this crag and traverse the foot of the obvious Great Slab to reach a permanent spring known as The Waterspout; Bowfell Buttress lies across the wide scree fan to the right.

Time 1 hour 45 mins.

Our route climbs the right arête of White Wall – a prominent wall rising above a big terrace about half way up the right side of Bowfell Buttress. This is easily reached by scrambling up North Gully (right hand side of the buttress) for 25m, then out left onto the ridge and up to below the first of two short grooves in the arête.

Woolly Jumper 60m E1 5b ***

Named after a sheep with short-lived aeronautic ambitions!
